Just counting the number of P2s raced at Ironman Hawaii and excluding all other models, Cervelo would have won the 2010 Kona Bike count (the unofficial "world championships for triathlon bike manufacturers"). That's how popular the P2 is, thanks to its no-nonsense delivery of performance and its comfortable geometry.

The P2 is part of the P-series, made for the battle against the clock from prologue to the Race Across America and from sprint triathlon to Ironman.

Characteristics:

- Cervelo's tried and true geometry, putting the rider in a fast and comfortable position.
- Aerodynamic design to reduce drag resistance and increase speed.
- Handling and stiffness characteristics straight from the road models

TECHNOLOGY*P2 Aero Seatstays

- Special TrueAero Shape

- Profile designed in the direction of airflow (horizontally)
- Different shape on the inside than on the outside (to deal with the spinning wheel)

- S-Bend for some additional vertical compliance (keeping in mind that the frame plays a minor role in vertical compliance anyway)
