OK, so this bike has won more time trials and triathlons than any other in history - by a country mile. But more importantly, it is the most used bike at Ironman racing and time trialing ever - by "regular" customers. No wonder it is still the benchmark for the entire bike industry, and the most copied bike in history.

So its popularity remains, because the original is still unmatched (Emma Pooley used her spare bike - a P3 - to win the 2010 TT World Championships). And with the Ultegra spec, the P3 is now in reach for more people than ever.

The P3 is part of the P-series, made for the battle against the clock from prologue to the Race Across America and from sprint triathlon to Ironman.

Characteristics:

- Cervelo's tried and true geometry, putting the rider in a fast and comfortable position.
- Aerodynamic design to reduce drag resistance and increase speed.
- Handling and stiffness characteristics straight from the road models
