If you've tried traditional relationship therapy you probably remember being asked to sit on a pricey, comfortable couch and follow your impulse to "talk out" all that anger, frustration and irritation with your partner, spouse, child or parent.

When you're booking your first session with a therapist you probably don't expect he'll ask you to bring a pair of sunglasses. Or build a domino tower. Unless of course, that therapist is Phil DeLuca, the UnTalk™ therapist.
