SSD chemical laboratory for cleaning and washing currencies is an international laboratory registered after the joint approval of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund in 1951. It was started to assist and help Governments, Banks, Companies and Business people to clean their coated or defaced bank notes.

Currencies that are transformed during transportation to secure them from hijackers, Corrupt government officials, Terrorists, bandits and others. SSD chemical laboratory was first based in Switzerland and one branch in NEW YORK.

But due to currency safety especially those in transition it was agreed upon to form another branch in South Africa which is located in Johannesburg so that it handles consignments in Africa and other surrounding countries to reduce on the risk of being stolen by outsiders in the transit due to long distance.
