Keplay is an AI-powered testing tool that specializes in creating test cases and generating stubs and mocks for end-to-end testing. By automating test generation, it helps teams significantly improve code coverage, achieving up to an impressive 90% test coverage in just a matter of minutes using open-source testing resources. Keplay offers several notable features, including a straightforward Integration Framework for incorporating new libraries, the ability to convert API calls into test cases and data mocks, and the capability to handle a wide range of detailed test scenarios. Additionally, it supports four programming languages: Java, , Python, and Go.
