WHAT IS WHEELCHAIR?

A wheelchair is a mobility device that helps people with physical disabilities or injuries to move around. It typically consists of a seat, footrests, four wheels, and handles to push or self-propel the chair. Wheelchairs come in different sizes, shapes, and features to suit the needs of different users.

WHO USING WHEELCHAIRS?

Wheelchairs are used by people who have difficulty walking or standing due to various reasons such as paralysis, spinal cord injuries, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, amputations, or other conditions that affect mobility. They may also be used by people who experience temporary disabilities due to injuries or surgeries.

Wheelchairs provide users with increased independence and mobility, allowing them to move around and participate in daily activities. They can also improve quality of life by reducing the physical strain and discomfort associated with walking or standing for long periods. Overall, wheelchairs are an essential tool for people with disabilities to help them live more active and fulfilling lives.
